VOL. III: NO. 8. THE PAPER THAT PRINTS THE NEWS SATURDAY MORNING SEPTEMBER 9, 1911. THE PAPER THAT EVERYBODY READS TWO CENTS

Beattie Found Guilty of First Degree Murder

At Once Sentenced to Die in Electric Chair November 24--Jury was Out Only 57 Minutes

Chesterfield, C. H., Va., Sept. 8—After deliberating but 57 minutes the jury in the Henry Clay Beattie Jr., case, returned a verdict of guilty of murder in first degree at about 6 o'clock Friday evening. After over ruling a motion for a new trial, Judge Watson sentenced Beattie to be electrocuted Friday November 24.

Harry M. Smith, Jr., attorney for the defense and Prosecutor Wendenburg occupied the afternoon with their arguments and the final plea to the jury was concluded by the prosecutor shortly before 5 o'clock, whereupon the jury was at once sent to its room. It was generally expected that, if a verdict was arrived at, the jury would at least consume the greater part of the night, so when the word was passed around scarcely an hour later that the twelve men were ready to report, it was greeted with surprise.

Pale and plainly nervous, Beattie, accompanied by his father and atterneys, took his place in the court room to hear the verdict. The short time the jury had deliberated gave them little hope for a favorable verdict and their faces showed the disappointment even before the clerk had read the fatal words.

Caught by Gates at Crossing

While attempting to drive over the Main street crossing just ahead of fast westbound train No 13 at 8 o'clock Friday evening, a buggy driven by William Summerfield was caught by the gates. Bystanders rushed to the driver's aid and succeeded in dragging the rig from the crossing just in time to prevent a collision although one of the wings of the gates was broken off.

Grow Large Near Keene

A mammoth puff-ball was found by J. E. Norman yesterday afternoon on the Alva Beall farm near Keene. The mushroom weighed 4 lbs 2 oz. and measured 24 in. in circumference.

Called Home by Illness of Mother

Joseph Castetter returned yesterday from Eaton, Ind. He was called here by the serious illness of his mother.

James Carton, who was operated on at the Keenan hospital Wednesday for appendicitis continues to improve gradually.

SCHOOL PUPILS REGISTER FRIDAY

Yesterday was registration day in the public schools and 1103 pupils were present to receive their book lists and make preparations for beginning work in earnest on Monday morning.

The registration is somewhat less than last year, but it will probably exceed that number by Monday morning when all pupils have returned from their vacations and been registered on the lists. The count of 1103 does not include the students of the second, third and fourth year of the High school.

Supt. Bryant announces that in the assignment of pupils, recently published, the assignment of pupils i this section may choose between South Lawn and Sycamore buildings according to their preference, with the exception of first grade pupils and they are assigned to Sycamore building, on account of the fact that many parents object to the railroad crossing at Fifth street.

James Buser Victim of Dread Typhoid

James Buser, aged 21 son of Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Buser of the vicinity of Fresno died Friday morning at 10 o'clock after a two weeks' illness of typhoid fever.

James Buser was one of the family of eight, who are suffering with the same malady. The rest of the family are each seriously ill, but the physician stated last evening that at present none of them are in an alarming condition. The plight of the family with seven cases of typhoid fever and one death is indeed deplorable and the sympathy of the entire community goes out to them.

James Buser was a promising young man, respected in the community where he had spent his entire life, and his death comes as a shock to his many friends.

Funeral services will be held Monday afternoon and interment will take place in the Fresno cemetery.

Buried under Fall of Earth in Mine

William Wilhelm, Aged 70, Sustains Broken Shoulder in Mishap Friday

Accident Occurs in Small Mine on Alex. Renfrew Farm, Just North of Canal Lewisville--Companion, by Hard Work, Rescues Him

Caught under a fall of false roof in a mine on the Alex Renfrew farm, just north of Canal Lewisville, Friday, William Wilhelm, aged about 70 years, had his right shoulder broken besides being badly cut about the head and face and body bruised. The victim was buried under about 5 feet of earth and it was only by the prompt efforts of Lee Fortune, who was working in the mine with him, that the accident was not a fatal one Fortune worked hard to rescue Wilhelm from under the cave-in and helped him from the mine. He was taken to his home in Canal Lewisville in a buggy by Mr. Renfrew and a physician called from this city, who rendered surgical attendance. Unless unforeseen complications ensue it is expected that the victim will recover.

Picking False Roof

The accident occurred at about one o'clock. The mine is a small one and not regularly operated. Wilhelm and Fortune had been working only a day or two in getting out a supply of coal for Mr. Renfrew and themselves. It had been pointed out to Wilhelm that the lack of adequate timbers made the mine a dangerous place and Friday he found that a portion of the false roof was loose. He began working on it with a pick, hoping to remove the danger when suddenly, a huge quantity of the earth was loosened and fell.

Worked Frantically

Wilhelm did not leave sufficient warning to make his escape so was caught under the fall and literally buried. Fortune happened to be near and hurried to his companion's aid. Working frantically, he was able to remove enough of the earth to rescue the victim and help him to the open air. Mr. Renfrew was informed of the accident and a hurry call sent for a physician, it being seen that Wilhelm was seriously hart. In the meantime, the victim was taken to his home in the village, where he was attended by the physician.

Cut About Forehead

An examination showed that Wilhelm's right shoulder had been crushed where the fall had struck him and there were several ugly gashes about the forehead, where he was hit by particles of rock. The victim is unmarried and makes his home with his stepmother, Mrs. John Wilhelm.

A Challenge for Race on Motor Cycle

"If Renner has an idea that his Excelsior motor cycle is the speediest in the city, he can get a race from a man riding an Indian machine and for a purse that will be worth while," said W. W. Bechtol last evening while discussing the remarkable time made by the winner of the races at the fair grounds Labor day.

Would Get Man

Mr. Bechtol has so far recovered from the injuries he sustained in the races last Monday, when his machine struck a dog on the track as to be able to walk down town. He stated that he did not expect to enter any more races but that he would get a man anxious to try conclusions with Renner for a handsome purse.

During the Fair

If Renner accepts the challenge, it is probable that the race will be pulled off during the county fair. This event would prove a big feature of the racing program and would create intense interest, following the enthusiasm raised by the three motor-cycle races Labor day.

Kills Huge Black Viper

A. L. Crowthers killed a black viper, 2½ feet long, near the west entrance to the upper plant of the American Art Works Thursday afternoon.

Woodmen Plan Big Initiation

A meeting of the Modern Woodmen will be held in the Modern Woodmen hall next Thursday evening when arrangements will be completed for a big initiation to be held soon. It is probable that the Columbus degree team with do the work. The same evening the uniform team of the lodge will also be reorganized.

John Roof and Harvey Royer of Wills Creek were in the city yesterday as business visitors.

Kristofek will Leave Art Works

Frank Kristofek, who for several years has been connected with the American Art Works, as manager of the celluloid department, has tendered his resignation and it is understood will sever his connection with the company within the next several months, probably January 1, 1912.

When asked concerning his future plans last evening, Mr. Kristofek stated that he had not yet reached a definite decision, in view of the fact that he expected to remain with the Art Works for the time being.

Appointment of Prof. Cresap is Confirmed

At a meeting of the school board held last evening the appointment of Prof. Cresap as vice principal of the High school was confirmed by the board.

Other matters of a routine nature were attended to, bills were paid and affairs in general were made ready for the opening session of the year's work on Monday morning.

ON MOTOR TRIP

Mr. and Mrs. Jos. R. Michaels and daughter Grace and son Harry of Wheeling passed through the city yesterday afternoon in a seven passenger Packard touring car. The party are making an extended motor trip of the east, and expect to visit Buffalo and Niagara Falls before arriving in New York City where they will spend a week as the guests of Mr. Michael's brother, E. L. Michaels.

Chestnut Hill School Dedicated

The opening of the handsome new school at Chestnut Hill was indeed an enjoyable occasion last evening. The neat brick building is complete and ready for the opening session of school.

The building stands at a high point just north of the old school and from it one has a beautiful view across the hills that surround Coshocton and out over a portion of the Tuscarawas valley in the distance. In face the location is one of the prettiest in the country.

At the opening last evening the exercises were presided over by the teacher for the coming year, Rollo Banks, and addresses were made by Judge Frank Ashman, Prosecuting Attorney George Klien and Senator William Green.

Many Coshocton people drove out and enjoyed the evening. Following the program refreshments were served and a pleasant evening enjoyed by all present.

Called to Akron Account of Illness

J. S. Craig of South Fourth street left yesterday afternoon for Akron where he was again called by the illness of his sister Mrs. C. B. Mapes of that place.

Salvation Army Will Hold Harvest Festival

The local organization of the Salvation Army are preparing for a Harvest Festival and for this occasion they request donations from all friends of the cause.

This annual effort is made in order to meet the demands upon the society and at present any donations of fruit, produce or money willmaterially aid in the missionary work of the Army.

A display of fruit and produce, the gifts of friends and members of the organization will be arranged for at the hall in the near future and the proceeds of a sale to be held later will be used in the missionary work of the organization.

In every town or city where the work of the Salvation Army is actively carried on, it is recognized as an invaluable aid to all charitable work. The presence of the Salvation Army in any town means that that town is a better one. The poor are assisted homes made brighter, and preventive measures of Army workers save many from evil lives.

Funds and donations toward the Harvest Festival may be sent to the officer in charge at his headquarters, 127 Walnut street.

Finds Horse Gone; Searches all Day

Neighbor Forgot to Tell Chas. Randles, S. Seventh St. That Nephew had Called and Taken Animal Early in Morning--Suspects Theft

Just because one of his neighbors neglected to deliver a message to him, Charles Randles of South Seventh street was on the anxious seat all day Friday for fear one of his horses had been stolen from the barn during Thursday night. After searching the entire day, Randles finally found the missing animal at the home of a nephew, named Crumblett in the Canal Lewisville vicinity.

Nephew Came Early

The horse was found to be missing by Randles when he went to the barn Friday morning. Visions of a horse thief came to him and he lost little time in starting a search. It developed that his nephew, desiring to use the horse during the day, had taken him from the barn. He arrived before Randles had arisen for the day and not wishing to disturb him, left word with a neighbor to tell him where the horse had been taken to. The neighbor left for his work without delivering the message, hence Randles' anxiety.

Will Probe Election in Cuyahoga

Columbus, Sept. 8.—Secretary of State Graves has approved an appropriation of $2000 made by the Cuyahoga county election board to probe the election scandal involving F. R. Williams, a Democratic judge, who has been arrested on charges of fraud in connection with the counting of Democratic ballots in precinct K. of the Third ward Cleveland.

The poll book shows that James Miskell received only two votes yet a number of people declare they voted for him.

The case was placed before secretary Graves by Dan T. Miller and J. J. Fitzgerald, members of the election board.

The law requires the judges of both parties to count all votes but the Democratic judge counted Democratic votes and the Republican judge the Republican votes. The secretary of state scored this practice.

THROUGH LOWERY FARM

Instead of the Henry Barrick farm, the new road to be built in Jackson township a contract for which was let by the commissioners, Thursday, extends through the D. J. Lowery farm.

Draught from Divorce Court for Blizzards

Columbus, Sept., 8.—The draught from the divorce court has blighted the romance of the Blizzard family. Dora Blizzard has entered suit in the common pleas court for a divorce from her husband, William Blizzard, whom she married in 1890 in Kentucky, the ground of the divorce is gross neglect, and the wife alleges that since 1908 her husband has been blowing about the country, his present whereabouts being to her unknown.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dugan of Conesville shopped in town yesterday.

Extra Road Levy Only in Case of Emergency

Columbus, O., Sept 8.—The state tax commission is anxious to head off the reported plans of many county officials to levy taxes for road purposes without regard for the one per cent. tax limitations.

Some county commissioners are of the opinion that levies for road purposes are unlimited owing to the fact that the general assembly left one of the road laws purposely unrepealed. The state commission interprets the law as allowing unlimited levies only for road "emergencies," such as the destruction of roads or bridges by water, storms and the like.

The Franklin county commission some days ago decided to levy three-fifths of a mill for building roads in Franklin county. The state commission, in a statement to County Auditor Sayre, declares this to be illegal.

GEORGE BALCH DIES AFTER BRIEF ILLNESS

An illness of less than twelve hours duration caused the death of George Balch aged 73, Friday morning at 6:30 o'clock at his home near Canal Lewisville.

Mr. Balch had been afflicted by heart trouble for some time past but his condition was so serious as to cause any alarm to the members of his family. Thursday he was in the city and consulted his family physician. He seemed better than for some time on Thursday evening, until about 7 o'clock when he was siezed by an attack of heart trouble and sank rapidly through the night until the end came early Friday morning.

Mr. Balch is survived by four daughters, Mrs. E. E. Reamer Mrs. John McCleary of West Lafayette the Misses Leura and Nenna Balch of the home, and John Balch of Canal Lewisville. Two sisters Mrs. Joseph Wood and Mrs. Fulton Sayer of this city and two brothers Charles of Coshocton and Samuel of Missouri also survive.

The deceased was born in Knox county and, with the exception of three years spent in Missouri, his entire life was spent in Ohio. He had resided in Coshocton county for more than sixty years of this life.

Mr. Balch was, for the past few years, successfully engaged in the business of farming and stock raising and previous to that time in earlier years he was engaged in the lumber business.

Funeral services will be held from the late home near Canal Lewisville Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock sun time the Rev R. H. Whitehurst of the Methodist church officiating.

The remains will be laid to rest in the Canal Lewisville cemetery the following acting as pall-bearers: Curtis Boyd, Allen Wier, Geo. West, Herman Carnahan, T. B. RAenfrew, and Milton Elliott.

MARQUARD HAS WON VICTORIES OVER THE BEST

New York, Sept. 7.- The ten out of twelve victories credited to Rube Marquard since the Cincinnatis conquered him July 18 take in all of the first division opponents and the two top teams in the second division. Neither the Brooklyns nor Bostons have figured in the games, and as these teams are seventh and eighth, respectively, credit must be given to Marquard for doing his work against the strongest array of opponents that could be lined up against him. That being the case, the nine out of ten victories are all the more worth while.

Further evidence of the Rube's mettle is found in a more elaborate study of the games. Most of them have been hard to win—games won by a narrow margin by the Giants— with the result in doubt to the finish and requiring the pitcher to keep his nerve and effectiveness to pull through. They were games which easily might have been lost with any wobbling on Marquard's part, and therefore more of a test of his ability than if they had been one sided.

Marquard beat the Reds 8 to 3 July 24, that game being rather easy. He shut out St. Louis 8 to 0 July 29 and didn't have to stay keyed up in that game, but July 31 he won a 3 to 2 battle from the Cardinals. The Pirates beat him Aug. 5, 3 to 1, Marquard not finishing the game. Aug. 9 he and Crandall pitched against the Cubs, the Giants winning in a walk. The score was 16 to 5.

The Rube was pitted against Alexander Aug. 14, and won a hard-fought scrap by a score of 3 to 2. Barring the game of Aug. 5, the only contest since July 18 in which he has shown lack of form was Aug. 19. In that game, against the Reds, he was in a fair way to be beaten when he was taken out. Mathewson saved that one for the Giants. Three close games then followed, two of them reving. Marquard beat Chicago 3 to 2 Aug. 21 and beat Pittsburg 2 to 1 Aug. 24. Both of these were splendidly earned victories for the big southpaw. Aug. 28 he shut out the Cardinals 2 to 0.

Sept. 1, the blanked the Phillies with one hit and the following day finished a game for Crandall and blanked the Phllies in the final round. Monday however, he lost a game to Boston.

HELP HENS TO SHED THEIR COATS

MOLTING PERIOD CAN BE HASTENED BY GIVING PROPER FEED AND CARE.

KEEP HOUSE AND YARD CLEAN

Sanitary Surroundings and Freedom From Parasites Are Important at This Time.

Poultry raisers are now beginning to wonder how to secure a greater number of eggs during the winter. Possibly nothing better can be done at this time to help obtain the desired results than to assist the hen to shed her old coat of feathers and as early as possible to have a new one. Many methods have been tried to force early molting, but the best poultry breeders consider all of them contrary to natural laws and of course injurious to the hen. Such methods as plucking the feathers or starving the hen for ten days or two weeks and then feeding a heavy ration may bring the desired results, but they are crude methods and usually in time prove a loss to the poultry keeper.

However, nature may be assisted at this period to complete the molting rapidly and at an early date. The first step should be to get the poultry house and yards in a perfectly clean and sanitary condition. Too many poultry keepers forget that a clean and sanitary place is needed for fowls in the late summer. Dirty and unsanitary conditions cause the fowl to be diseased or to lack vigor. The feathers also become stiffer and have a tendency to stick tighter. If a fowl is in this condition molting is retarded.

The second essential is to have the hen free of lice and other parasites. Once a week she should be dusted with a louse powder or a liquid louse killer should be sprayed into her feathers. If she has scabby legs they should be washed daily with soapy water and rubbed thoroughly with carbolated vaseline. If she has a disease use the ax and then burn the body.

The third and possibly the most important assistance than can be given is to feed proper molting rations. It has been learned by experience that certain kinds of feed are especially adapted for the molting period. A very good ration consists of three parts whole corn, two parts wheat, one-half part beef scraps and one-half part linseed meal. Table scraps or pork scraps may be used instead of the beef scraps. Sunflower seeds may be used instead of the linseed meal. With this feed plenty of green food, clover hay and grit.

The molting ration will be more effective if the fowls have been fed a very light ration for one week previous to starting the hens with the molting rations. Male birds should be removed from the hens at this season. All feathers dropped by the hens should be gathered and burned.

During this period the hens will lay few eggs, but will begin before winter sets in and, if given proper care, will produce eggs during the entire winter. No hens more than one year old should be kept for winter egg production. Now is the time to sell all hens over one year old. Early matured pullets and young hens are the best producers of eggs during the winter, and of course the profitable ones to keep.

THE WISE WHEAT GROWER.

There was a man in our town
 And he was wondrous wise,
He knew that if he wanted wheat
 He'd have to fertilize.
"It's nitrogen that makes things green,"
 Said this man of active brain:
"And potash makes the good, strong straw,
 And phosphate plumps the grain.
But it's clearly wrong to waste plant food
 On a wet and soggy field:
I'll surely have to put in drains
 If I'd increase the yield.
And after I have drained the land,
 I must plow it deep all over;
And even then I'll not succeed
 Unless it will grow clover.
Now acid soils will not produce
 A clover sod that's prime,
So if I have a sour soil,
 I'll have to put on lime,
And after doing all these things,
 To make success more sure,
I'll try my very best to keep
 From wasting the manure.
So I'll drain, and lime, and cultivate,
 With all that that implies;
And when I've done that thoroughly,
 I'll manure and fertilize."

The Welsh Woman's Red Cloak.

The red cloak which the Welsh women wear is not only ornamental, but it also contributed to the repelling of the last invasion of their island. When a French force of 1,400 men under General Tate landed at Fishguard in 1797 Lord Cawdor hastily gathered together the local militia, while several hundred women had followed their husbands from the hills dressed in the national costume red mantles and men's beaver hats. The French, knowing that scarlet was the British uniform, concluded that large reenforcements had reached Fishguard and hastened to make an unconditional surrender.—London Chronicle.

THE THEATRE

THRILLED THOUSANDS

An audience of over 6000 people at the Chautauqua Institution, N. Y. recently paid Lyman H. Howe's Travel Festival which will appear here at the Sixth Street Theatre on Monday, September 11 one of the most splendid tributes that has been accorded any attraction.

It was far more eloquent than the usual "Chautauqua Salute" which originated at this renowned center of culture.

Mr. Howe's entertainment has been for years one of the most popular and pleasing entertainments on the entire Chautauqua course. Though some of the world's greatest statesmen, Diplomats, Orators, prima donnas, bands, etc., appear at Chautauqua, Mr. Howe's Travel Festival commands a larger attendance than any other event.

The vast auditorium is not nearly large enough to hold the great crowds that flock there on Mr. Howe's dates.

Not only do the regular Chautauqua turn out en masse but large numbers come from the surrounding cities and towns.

On the last engagement over 1500 people were obliged to stand outside the big amphitheatre where 5000 were seated.

One of the features of the program inspired so much admiration and enthusiasm that the audience considered the usual "Chautauqua Salute" entirely inadequate as an expression of its appreciation.

The scenes were entitled "Symphonies of the Sea." They might have been entitled "Masterpieces of Marine Photography" with equal appropriateness. At the outset the views of dawn at sea evoked much applause but as the scenes changed Mr. Howe's musical director played "Love's Old Sweet Song." The effect was instantaneous. The music was so timely and happily chosen that the whole audience promptly burst into song.

FREDERICK THE GREAT

We will not try to deceive you about the show, we will let Frederick do that Thursday night that is what he is coming for, to deceive and mystify you. We are here to give you all the truthful information we can about him as an entertainer.

You all remember "Hermann," many of you have seen him, and wondered at his mystifying art. Frederick the Great, eighteen years ago became the only logical successor that has upheld his name by performing all of his tricks in Magic but has become famous the world over for the number of new ones he has developed. Frederick the Great also presents this season the largest and most elaborate collection of all the latest of European and Hindoo illusions.

It would be impossible to even give the remotest idea of the magnitude of this show, but from reports from our head office we have no hesitancy in stating that Frederick the Great, is without chance of any contradiction, the most wonderful magician the world has ever known.

Mr. F. B. Williams, business manager for Frederick the Great states that they have been doing a record business since the season opened, so we will suggest to those wanting good seats to secure them as early as possible, for we expect to sell standing room only by Thursday night.

Some Sacrifice.

Jenny — Jack, you ought to make some sacrifice to prove that you love me. What will you give up when we are married? Jack—I'll—I'll give up being a bachelor. — Philadelphia Inquirer.

Transparent.

Teacher—Now, remember, Nellie, that anything you can see through is transparent. Can you name something that is transparent? Small Nellie—Yes, ma'am; a keyhole.

Strenuous Action.

Tailor—Has Mr. Owens taken any action on that bill of his yet? Collector—Yes; he kicked me out the last time I called to collect it.—Boston Transcript.

Virtue alone outbuilds the pyramids: her monuments shall last when Egypt's fall.—Young.

CELERY GROWING.

Directions Given by Successful Cultivator of Vegetable in Pennsylvania.

Last year's experience proves very forcefully that celery needs considerable moisture as well as to be well fertilized, says a Pennsylvania grower in a letter to the American Agriculturist.

Nearly all of our celery plants are started in small greenhouses, sowing the seed from the last of February to the latter part of March. Our soil is red shale loam, sand, fine siftings from coal ashes, muck and quite well rotted manure. The houses are cheap affairs, heated with stoves, and used for growing a few vegetable plants each spring. Seed of Golden Self Blanching celery is sown in benches, sometimes in rows three inches apart and sometimes broadcast. If we have good men to thin we like to broadcast. In sowing by this method we use a baking powder can with small holes in the cover. A small hand seeder is used for sowing in rows, but with the plow and coverer off, because we want to sift fine dirt very lightly to cover the seed, only about one-sixteenth of an inch.

Before sowing the soil is made very fine and level, because we do not want water to run from higher parts, and bonemeal and wood ashes are used to fertilize this. We use 600 pounds of the former and about 300 of the latter for 1,800 square feet of glass. Calico curtains are used to shade these benches until the plants are up.

We generally try to plow our muck in the fall. In spring the land is well disked, then eight tons of 14 per cent dissolved South Carolina rock is applied to the three acres and well worked in. Then we sow muriate of potash at the rate of about 1,300 pounds an acre, after which we plank the ground for setting, weighting the planker enough to give us a sufficiently firm bed. We set by hand, using two fingers of one hand as dibber, being very careful not to get plants set too deep or so soil is over the heart. This would keep them from growing.

Rows are three feet apart where we expect to blanch with boards and two and a half when it is to go into the celery house. Plants are set four or five inches apart in the rows. If the soil is too dry when we wish to set we have water poured along the rows in a little stream, being careful to follow the mark, made with a light wheelbarrow frame, along the side of a line.

After the plants are set we put on about 1,300 pounds of 12 per cent dried blood to the acre, running it right along the rows close to the plants. As soon as the plants are four inches high in the greenhouses we clip the tops and are sure to clip again before we set, taking about half of the tops off. Sometimes the plants are clipped three times. And we thin them there to about 100 to the square foot of bed. They are often thicker.

As soon as the plants in the field get rooted a little we commence giving them nitrate of soda, putting it as close to the rows as possible or in reach of the roots and putting on only a very little while the plants are small, because we want it to feed them without shocking or giving them a setback. This nitrate of soda is given to them every ten days, adding to the amount each time as the plants grow, so we use about 1,300 pounds of this to the acre. We use about two tons each of muriate of potash, dried blood and nitrate of soda on the three acres. That is why it is about 1,300 of each an acre.

We try to keep the soil stirred around the plants all the time, giving level culture, using a horse cultivator when the soil is dry enough so we do not need to mud shoe the horse.

After the celery has been set about two months it should be ready to blanch, sometimes before.

Too Deserving.

A young village maiden had obtained the modesty prize. "I suppose, then, my child," said a Parisian lady, addressing her, "you are the most modest girl in the parish?"

"There is not the slightest doubt about that, ma'am, and it's a downright shame I didn't get all the other prizes!"—Paris Journal.

Try Peartel's famous pineapple snow, it's good for the appetite.

The Frivolous Limit.

His main trouble was that he persisted in treating everything frivolously. Nothing was sacred to him. Suggest any subject, any one whatever—one that was absolutely rending the world asunder and he would crack a joke about it.

"That chap," said a serious minded friend in a wild attempt to do justice to the other's frivolity, "owing that chap is the only human being on earth who can sing the Declaration of Independence to a concertina accompaniment!"—New York Times.

THE SOUL.

My soul is like an oar that momently
Dies in a desperate stress beneath the wave.
Then glitters out again and sweeps
the sea.
Each moment I'm newborn from some new grave.

Origin of the Census.

The census probably had its origin in Rome. The term comes from the Roman officer called censor, whose duty it was, among other things, to enumerate the people. The Roman census must have been minute and full, since it indicated not only the number of the people, but their respective offices, domestic positions, wealth, etc. It seems that the Roman census was taken about every fifth year. The first effort to take a census in Great Britain was made in 1801, but it did not extend to Ireland. The first census ever taken in the United States was in the year 1790, since which time it has been taken regularly every ten years.

Martin Sheridan Now Hard in Training for Coming Championships

New York, Sept. 8—For the first time in more than a year Martin Sheridan, who is rated as the greatest athlete in the world, is now down to real hard training for the coming meets. Sheridan has taken up his abode at Celtic park and is working faithfully to get rid of some of the extra weight that he has accumulated during the past twelve months. Sheridan is doing most of his work on the track and still has the old jump at the start that used to bring him victory in the 100 yard race in the all round series. Martin works every night with Mel Sheppard. The pair run fifty yard dashes and always finish within a yard of each other. The discus thrower gets the jump on Peerless Mel, but Shep paces comes with a rush at the finish and generally nips Martin right at the tape. Sheridan figures that if he can shed about forty pounds he will be able to fling the Greek saucer farther than it has ever been hurled by some ten feet.

Italian Colony Again Aroused

New York, Sept. 8.—Just when the police were beginning to congratulate themselves that the arrest of Giuseppe Costabile, "the fox," had driven the black hand agents here to cover, another bomb was exploded in the heart of the long-suffering Italian colony.

The bomb let go in front of the offices of prominent Italian bankers and steamship agents. As usual, no one was hurt, but the moral effect of the outrage coming at a time when the Italian colony had been lulled to fancied security, was tremendous.

It was the first bomb exploded since last Saturday, a fact significant because for the past month these explosions have occurred on an average of one every [illegible] days.

But instead of causing the police to lose faith in their belief that in Costabile they have the leader of New York's criminals, the occurrence is regarded as a threat of vengeance of Costabile's associates against those of his fellow countrymen who may dare to testify against him.

A grand jury is to meet in a day or two is expected to indict Costabile for violation of the "dangerous weapons" law. Meantime the search for more evidence against him continues.

GIVES POSSE THE LAUGH

Daring [illegible] Female Bandit Easily Eludes Her Pursuers.

Mt. Pleasant, Pa., Sept. 8.—A dashing young female horsethief is leading members of the state constabulary and a band of 300 farmers and liverymen a merry chase over the hills of Westmoreland and Fayette counties. As she flew like the wind on the back of a fleet footed mustang she laughed at the farmers and police when they fired a volley of shots after her. None of the bullets took effect.

The young woman is described as being 19 years old, a decided brunette and "perfectly beautiful." She is accused of stealing more than 40 horses within the last week.

The state police reported that the young woman has been joined by a well-dressed young man, who is also very handsome, and who, like his fair companion, has a fleet-footed mount.

The chase so far has covered 81 miles, but the posses and police have been unable to get closer to the fugitives than a quarter of a mile. One farmer reported that he was held up in the road by the young woman and relieved of his gun with which he intended to shoot her.

Dope for the Bugs

O'Toole has now won three games for Pittsburg. In the three contests he has continued the wonderful record that he held in the American association, that of registering more strikeouts than he allowed hits. In three games he has fanned twenty-six batsmen and at present going he will make a strong bid to wrest the strike-out honors from Rube Marquard.

Eddie Murphy, the Boston lightweight, is looking for a chance to sign up with Packey McFarland, or Ad Wolgast, or both. Murphy is obviously nervous, but has been looked over by fight experts here and pronounced competent. In a short workout, he engaged three men and proved far superior to all of them.

Pittsburg fans figure that the pennant beans have been spilled, but think that O'Toole certainly will make them finish better than third.

Frank Gotch who Monday defeated George Hackenschmidt's hopes of ever becoming the champion wrestler of the world, is on his way to St. Paul after his midnight "sneak" out of Chicago. He will go from St. Paul to his farm near Humboldt, Iowa, for a rest before beginning his world tour.

Rube Oldring's eight hits out of ten times at bat, Wednesday, was something of a hitting feat. Not many like them.

Charley Hickman, released by Milwaukee, is through with the game. He has played his string to the end and all that is left of a once valuable ball player is the ability to get hits.

St. Louis Cardinals are gradually slipping back. Frank Chance perhaps was right when in the midst of their rush he described the dash as a flash in the pan. Bresnahan will do well to finish the season with half his games won. Pitchers have gone bad on him.

At the rate Toledo is stepping right now the first division isn't an impossibility. Milwaukee has been passed and Indianapolis and St. Paul are not so far away either.

There are only two Columbus players who have made five hits this season. Congalton got five out of six against Minneapolis in a game at Nicollet park, and William Hinchman got his five off Leng and Schneider Wednesday. They were all clean drives and each one of them went to the left garden.

Wednesday night O'Toole received a telegram from a New York theatrical agency offering him a flattering weekly stipend for ten weeks in vaudeville. The only thing Marty can do is pitch baseball and blush like a school girl. He would make no decision, preferring to wait until he had a talk with Barney Dreyfuss.

Manager McGraw made the Giants pennant contenders this season by hanging onto three players whom fans regarded as lemons—Rube Marquard, Fred Merkle and Fred Snodgrass. Fans demanded the release of the three. Marquard was labeled the National gold brick of 1909, Merkle the National goat of 1908 and Snodgrass the National unknown of 1908. All three are playing great ball this season.

Ernest Swindell, new Nap pitcher from the Winston-Salem club of the Carolina association, has reported. He will get his first trial Monday in an exhibition game at Dayton. And pitch his first major league game in the east.

"Gee, it's easy to tell them how to play it when you're in the stand," observed Larry Doyle, "I wish I could do it every day."

Marty O'Toole has started off right smartly to prove that he really is a $22,500 pitcher in spite the calamity howlers. Now the fans are wondering what he will be in a couple of years if he can start off and win his first three.

Philadelphia's double barreled defeat of Boston makes the eighth time this season the Athletics have bagged two games in one afternoon.

The Yanks at least have the satisfaction of knowing that being bumped back into fourth place means they can't slip any further, while Boston persists in staying in the second column.

Last year it will be remembered that Jennings banked on passing the Athletics when he started into an eight-game series with St. Louis, and yet when those games were over St. Louis had won six of the eight games, and Ray, a pitcher who never won any other game, and is having a hard time holding his own in a lowly minor league, pitched three of the victories.

Johnny Kling tried to unnerve Marty O'Toole in his first game when he faced the Beaneaters the other day, but he failed. Kling has generally been successful in times past in rattling opposing pitchers and get their attention off the game as he did with Ty Cobb in the first world's series between the Cubs and the Tigers.

The Giants are short of pitchers in their fight for the pennant and Manager McGraw has sent a hurry call for Bert Maxwell, righthander bought of the Birmingham Southern league club. Rube Marquard and Christy Mathewson are the only pitchers McGraw can depend on.

Pitchers Tom O'Brien and Casey Hagerman, two of the mainstays of the Denver club, leading the Western Association, left Wednesday night to join the Boston Americans.

Haunted by the ghost of the man he killed with a fast ball, "Casey" Hagerman, bought from the Denver club by the Boston Red ox, is afraid to let himself out, for fear he will kill another.

George Quinn bought a ticket to the Gotch-Hackenschmidt comedy and then took a nap. He slept four days and asked how the betting was. He was told he didn't miss much, and went back to sleep.

Los Angles has repurchased Pitcher Walter Nagle from Boston Americans. Nagle is the bob who used Christian Science in an effort to stay in the big league.

By pitching slow curves, he says, Pitcher Jack Warhop of the Yankees, has held "Larry" Lajoie to four hits in three seasons. Little Jack likes to pitch to Big Larry, he says.

Joe Wilson, the first baseman who disappeared for a week this spring, will be given another by Toledo. With East Liverpool this season Wilson batted .374.

Eddie Smith, famous Pacific Coast fight referee, died in an Oakland, Cal., sanitarium, following an attack of brain fever.

The question of a match with Zybszxe is still unsettled but F. Gotch has expressed his willingness to take on any of the half-dozen wrestlers who are now clamoring for a match.

Boston Americans are about through with Eddie Karger, once one of the best southpaw pitchers in the business. Karger will go to the Eastern league, it is thought.

Pattison, big pitcher bought from Terre Haute by Cincinnati Reds, will finish his course in the Michigan "Aggie" institute, and will not report until July, next season.

Manager Stovall of the Naps has served notice that none of his men will be allowed to play on an all-star team this fall to give the American league champions practice in preparation for the world's series. The Naps are expecting to play a postseason series with the Reds for the championship of Ohio.

Although Frank Smith didn't join the Reds till the season was well advanced, he has pitched more decisive games than any of the other twirlers—25 in all, as against 22 for Gasper, the next busiest man.

The St. Louis players are pulling for Pittsburg to win the pennant. New York and Chicago are not popular with the Bresnahanigans.

"If Pittsburgh should take three out of four from St. Louis, they'll stay in the running for the flag. Wagner, Wilson and Clarke will be in the game when Chicago and New York are encountered." Thus spake a well known Pirate today.

Three St. Louis boys are now leading off for the Pirates—Bobby Byrne, Carey and Campbell.

Not an Agreeable Adviser.

"I shall never ask him for his advice again."

Nellie W. C. T. U. Meets

The Nellie W. C. T. U. met Monday evening Sept 4th., Miss. Kate Darling, Mrs. Gamertsfelder and Mrs. Smith were chosen delegates to our County Convention.

The following officers were elected for the coming year—

President—Mrs. J. P. Darling.

Vive-President — Mrs. Edward Darling.

Recording-Secretary—Mrs. Heffelinge.

Assistant-Sec.—Mrs. Gamertsfelder.

Cor. Secretary—Mrs. Husted.

Press Reporters — Miss Kate Darling and Mrs. Methum.

Treasurer-Mrs. Little.

Pianist—Mrs. Husted.

An instructive anti-narcotics program was then rendered.

Mr. Gamertsfelder gave some facts upon "The Cost of Using Tobacco" which were well calculated to make young men think "Which will be the better for me in ten years the habit or the money!"

Mrs. Edward Darling gave an interesting reading upon "The Opium Habit." The extent to which this habit is fastened upon the American people is startling. No wonder the alarm is being sounded. How guarded all should be in the use of that which so stealthily becomes our master—a master whose victims know no peace but in total slavery.

Mrs. Smith showed in a convincing way the evil effects of tobacco—its inroads upon the health and upon the income of those who use it. Financially, "It might have been" will never be the lament of the young man who finds he has not smoked or chew'd away a farm. "The effects of tobacco upon our schools" was well given by Miss Kate Darling. When such facts—the effects of tobacco upon the boys of our schools, are known to every intelligent white-ribbon r, to every up-to-date teacher and to observing people in general, is it not strange that we do so much to help the boys to reach superior manhood, and yet be careless about that which robs the boys of their physical strength dulls their minds, corrupts their morals?—In fact defeats the very purpose for which our schools are established.

Edith Methum had an esay upon "Cigaretts." The description of the boys who use cigaretts—their prospects for the future, the vast numbers on the list, are not pleasing pictures, but nevertheless true, not to nature, but to perverted nature.

After deciding upon some local plans of work, the members expressed themselves as not weary in well-doing but ready to begin the new year with increasing interest, greater efforts and firmer trust in our Leader the Lord of Hosts.

DAILY FASHION TALKS

BY MAY MANTON

WITH THE FASHIONABLE TUNIC SKIRT.

TUNIC skirts are exceedingly smart. This one is simple and graceful. Combined with the pretty peasant blouse, it makes a most attractive gown, adapted to many materials. This one is made of striped voile with trimming of satin and lace. The two tucks over each shoulder are becoming, and the V-shaped openings are new and effective. Altogether, the gown is an exceptionally pretty one. The tunic is made in two pieces that are joined at the center back. If liked the skirt could be of contrasting material, and this same voile, over a silk or satin foundation would be more elaborate in effect. The high waist line is fashionable and it is to be commended whenever it is found becoming, but the aim of every woman should be to study her own needs, and the belt can be substituted whenever it produces a better effect.

All serge weaves are to be much worn during this coming season and fine French serge with trimming of satin or velvet would be exceedingly handsome. For immediate wear, foulard or pongee could be made in this way with great success. Plain silk would be pretty too, with trimming of foulard, and figured foulard as trimming upon plain foundations, is exceedingly smart.

For the medium size the blouse will require 2½ yards of material 27, 1¾ yards 36 or 1¼ yards 44 inches wide, with ¾ yard of satin 27 inches wide, ⅞ yard of all-over lace and 1¼ yards of lace for collar and cuffs; for the skirt will be needed 6 yards 27, 5¾ yards 36 or 4⅜ yards 44 inches wide for voile or other material without up and down, but should there be figure or nap 6 yards 44 inches wide will be necessary.

7055 Fancy Peasant Blouse, 34 to 42 bust.
6943 Five Gored Skirt with Two-Piece Tunic, 22 to 32 waist.

A May Manton pattern of the blouse, No. 7055, sizes 34 to 42 inches bust, or of the skirt, No. 6943, sizes 22 to 32 inches waist, will be mailed to any address by the Fashion Department of this paper, on receipt of ten cents for each.

Q.—Is Christianity a failure? This question is asked because Christianity was announced in such glowing terms to the shepherds on the plains of Judea, nearly nineteen centuries ago, and up to the present time has failed most lamentably to accomplish all that was implied in its introduction. The herald angels sang—"Behold, we bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be unto all people" and "Peace on earth, good will to men" (Luke ii, 10-14). The statistics compiled by missionary associations show for the last century that at its beginning there were about 600,000,000 heathen people in the world; at its close there were nearly 1,200,000,000, almost double the number. To one born in Christendom, hundreds and thousands were born in heathendom. As for peace being established in the earth: never in all the annals of the race has there been such vast preparations for war and bloodshed as at the present time. In the place of the nations beating their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning-hooks (Isaiah ii, 4) just the reverse is taking place. Kindly answer my question.

Answer.—The Scriptures will answer your question. They show that the Creator's purpose for the present time is not the conversion of the world to Christianity, but merely the gathering out or the selection of a predestinated class, the Church of Christ, which in the Age or Dispensation to come, will establish universal peace in the earth, and cause the knowledge of the Lord to fill the world so that all the people shall know Him from the least to the greatest. Christianity will then be gloriously triumphant, as, at that time every knee shall bow and every tongue give praise to God (Revelation xix, 11-16).

SON A BURGLAR, NEWARK WOMAN TAKES OWN LIFE

BANISH THOSE GRAY HAIRS!

Kill the Dandruff Germs—Stop Hair Falling

Thousands of mothers are looking younger.—Their gray hairs are gone. The natural color has come back, and with it a new growth of soft, glossy, luxuriant hair. Why should you look old before your time, when you can look years younger by using

WYETH'S SAGE AND SULPHUR HAIR REMEDY

Dandruff Cured

Three applications removed all the dandruff and left my scalp clean, white and smooth.
Wm. Croak, Rochester, N. Y.

It Is Positively Guaranteed to Restore Faded and Gray Hair to Natural Color

If other "so-called" Restorers have failed, don't give up hope, but give WYETH'S SAGE AND SULPHUR HAIR REMEDY a trial. You run no risk. If it is not exactly as represented, your money will be refunded.

PROFIT BY OTHERS' EXPERIENCE

Gray Hair Restored

My hair was getting quite gray and falling out rapidly and I was troubled with a terrible itching of the scalp. My head was full of dandruff, which fell upon my clothes and kept me continually brushing it off. While on a visit to Rochester I heard of your Sage and Sulphur for the hair. I got a bottle and used it. A few applications relieved the itching, my hair stopped falling out and gradually came back to its natural color. It is now a nice dark brown color, soft, glossy and pliable. Several of my friends want to use it, and I want to know what you will charge me for six bottles of it.
MISS E. A. ROSS,
Sharon, Mercer Co., Pa.

Grew Hair on a Bald Head

For two or three years my hair had been falling out and getting quite thin until the top of my head was entirely bald. About four months ago I commenced using Sage and Sulphur. The first bottle seemed to do some good and I kept using it regularly until now I have used four bottles. The whole top of my head is fairly covered and keeps coming in thicker. I shall keep on using it a while longer, as I notice a constant improvement.

ARBITRATION VS. WAR

"The true lovers of peace, the men who have really helped onward the movement for peace, have been those who followed the footsteps of Washington and Lincoln and stood for righteousness as the supreme end of national life" says former President Roosevelt in a recent editorial, appearing in The Outlook, in which he protests against the United States being a party to peace pacts involving national honor as do the pending treaties.

Sounds well Teddy, but the movement for universal peace among the leading nations has become so strong that there simply is no stopping it. Despite all the present war talk among European nations, there is no question but that the days of the warlord are numbered. This idea of national honor, which really amounts after all to nothing more or less than a nation strutting about with a chip on her shoulder, does not appeal to twentieth century civilization as it did in the sixteenth century. We do not mean to infer by this that the people are losing their patriotism. They are merely coming to believe that there is another and more effective as well as humane way to uphold national honor.

The spectacle of two armies meeting upon a battlefield has always been a gory one and with modern methods of warfare, it has lost none of its brutality. Why should it be necessary that a man, who can be of use to humanity, give up his life for his country? Say what you will, war smacks of barbarism and the world is really beginning to get beyond it. Universal peace has already been delayed for several centuries. It cannot come too soon.

THE COUNTY FAIR SEASON

Because county fairs have changed is certainly no indication that they are losing their appeal or that they have lost their former usefulness. In fact, fairs would be strangely out of harmony with the people they are designed to serve if they did not change from year to year, for the people themselves surely change, demanding new things in place of old.

The county fair must keep pace with developments in the world of inventions; must recognize new ideas in farming methods, in handicraft, in household economy. Otherwise, it is certain to lose its appeal and its usefulness.

That a farmer is interested in automobiles may be an indication of his progressiveness. If he studies how spraying machines it probably indicates that he has grown weary of sacrificing his fruit crops each year to pests that may easily be destroyed. And his wife, if her intelligence matches his, wants to know about vacuum cleaners and the best system of saving labor in the kitchen.

Unless the promoters of rural fairs recognize this desire of their intelligent patrons they are neglecting the vital truth concerning the county fair problem. The fair will retain its usefulness as long as it caters to the wants of the public it is intended to serve, and i no longer. Mere sentiment has little to do with it.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

MORBID CURIOSITY

Strange how strong a hold morbid curiosity has on humanity.

No sooner had Beulah Binford, the "other woman" in the Beattie murder case, been released from the Richmond, Va. jail than a theatrical agent was on the ground with an offer to enter vaudeville.

Does this ambitious promoter believe that this wayward girl has any histrionic talent that would make a hit on the stage? Far be it from such. He merely imagines that the morbid curiosity of the American people will bring him a "bunch of coin" in the event that he can induce the girl, who has been given column after column of space in the newspapers during the past several weeks to appear in public.

And although we hate to admit it, the same curiosity that impels a crowd to flock about the body of a man mangled under the wheels of a train, would probably draw a full house to see Beulah Binford on the vaudeville stage. Doubtless public opinion will prevent the disgusting spectacle of this girl parading her shame in public, as it should.

A team of horses in an Illinois city took fright at an aeroplance and ran away. After accustoming themselves to the automobile, these equines found the air monster really too much.

Face Famine and Bandits

Shanghai, Sept. 8.—Two million Chinese are homeless in Ngan-Hwei and Sze-Chuen provinces and in the western part of Kiangsu province from the ravaging floods which have cost 100,000 lives and destroyed all crops.

Chinese soldiers are marching to defend American and other foreign missionaries in the danger zone where flood refugees have united with bandits and are killing and plundering.

The Methodist mission compound at Cheng Tu has been fortified and foreigners are housed there, but provisions are running short and starvation threatens them.

A British and United States gunboat made short cruises up the Yang-Tse-Klang river from here, and reported upon their return that the flood extended for miles on both sides of the natural river bed and that the dikes are covered or washed away.

Among the American and other foreign missionaries attached to stations in the provinces overrun by floods and consequent outlawry, and whose lives may be in danger, are the following: Joseph Beech, Middletown, Conn.; Mrs. Beech of Dixon, Ill.; George Nelmann of New Britain, Conn.; Ellek Williams, Urbana, Ill.; Mrs. Williams, Fort Dodge, Iowa; James M. Yard, Nichols, Conn.; Georgia E. Day, Keosauqua, Iowa; Ruth B. Smith, Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Winifred L. Stout, Hurley, S. D.; Anna L. Gollisch, Afton, Iowa.

In addition there are more than 35 others whose place of residence is given just as "United States" or "Canada." There are 70 Americans in Chengtu, province of Sze-Chuen, and adjacent country.

Hundreds of thousands of Chinese families are marooned in the mountains by the floods and are without food. Native dispatch runners report cases of cannibalism among the starving natives.

WOMAN SHOOTS AN ARCHITECT

Ordered From His Home She Opens Fire When He Reaches Street.

Chicago, Sept. 8.—Robert Bruce Watson, member of most of the leading clubs here, a wealthy architect and active in the Republican party, was shot and seriously wounded by Mrs. H. P. Coney. Mrs. Coney called at Watson's home and is said to have been ordered away. She waited on the sidewalk, however, and when he left home an hour later, drew a small revolver from her handbag and shot him. One bullet struck over his right ear and glanced off and one entered his thigh.

"I have known Watson a long time and I could not stand it when he turned me down," Mrs. Coney told the police. "He told me to get away from his home because his mother was there. It was more than I could stand and I shot him."

Mrs. Coney filed suit for divorce from her husband, a manufacturer, last February. It was dismissed, and a counter suit filed by him was sustained.

Drop Orchestras.

Chicago, Sept. 8. Two of Chicago's biggest theaters the Garrick and the Grand opera house have dropped the orchestra from their payrolls. The announcement was followed by the declaration that the trombones made too much noise in the pit. The Musicians' union, however, declared the move was made in an attempt to destroy it.

WASHINGTON GLADDEN

Famous Preacher Relieved of Active Work of Pastorate.

DIVINE'S LETTER MISINTERPRETED

Rev. Dr. Gladden Has Not Retired From His Pastorate.

Columbus, O., Sept. 8.—The report spread broadcast that Rev. Dr. Washington Gladden, author, sociologist and famous preacher, had resigned from the pastorate of First Congregational church because church attendance had fallen off, is denied by the doctor himself.

He states that his recent open letter to his congregation has been misunderstood; what he had said was that he wished to be relieved of the active duties in connection with his charge. Rev. Carl Patton, Dr. Gladden's assistant, has assumed these burdens.

Dr. Gladden was the originator of the phrase "tainted money," which came into great vogue a few years ago. He used it in objecting to the acceptance of John D. Rockefeller's money for missionary purposes.

FIRE ATTACKS ROYAL PALACE

Maids In Service of Queen Marguerita Flee in a Panic.

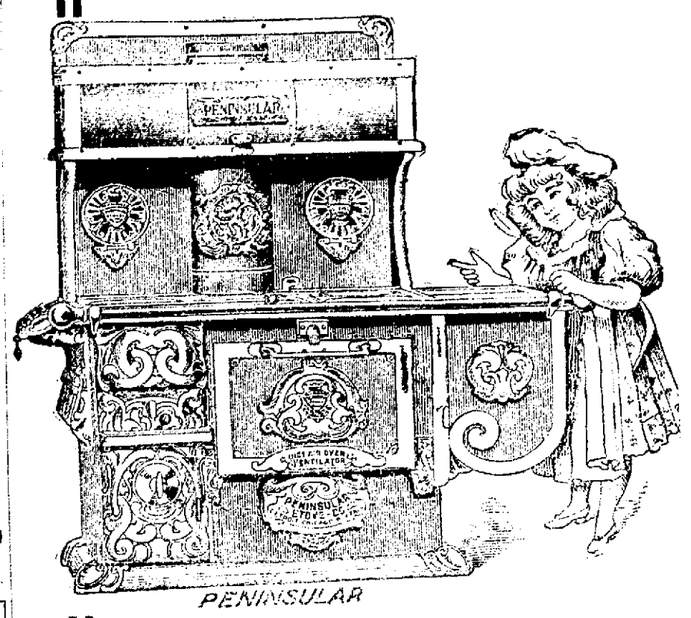

Rome, Sept. 8. A mysterious fire broke out suddenly in the palace of Dowager Queen Marguerita and caused great damage. It was believed to have been caused by crossed electric light wires. Attendants in the palace gave the alarm and assisted in fighting the flames.

Panic broke out upon the discovery of the blaze. Maids in the service of the dowager queen ran screaming into the courtyard with their hands filled with jewels.

The fire spread swiftly, being fed by the heavy draperies and tapestries which adorn the greater part of the interior of the palace. The dowager queen herself remained calm and directed the work of her servants in removing her valuables.

Workings of Single Tax.

New York, Sept. 8.—T. D. Taylor, who was elected mayor of Vancouver, B. C., on a platform that embraced the single tax proposition and who is now serving his second term, is at the Holland House. He reported that Vancouver was prospering under the new tax law and that he was going to work for something somewhat similar for the whole province of British Columbia.

HAS BATTLE WITH SHARKS IN MID-OCEAN

Danish Seaman, Pitched Overboard, Has a Thrilling Experience.

Galveston, Tex., Sept. 8.—The British steamship Nolizement, just in, brings a thrilling sea story of the rescue of a Danish seaman, Andy Anderson, who was found afloat in mid-ocean, 200 miles from land off St. Vincent, after five hours' battle with sharks and other fish. Anderson has recovered and appears little the worse for his experience, except the numerous scars and wounds on his body, from the attack of fish.

Anderson was a fireman on the British steamship Milton, bound for St. Vincent and at 4 o'clock in the morning, when just going on watch, a lurch of the vessel threw him into the sea, and the ship passed on. Fortunately he carried his knife with him and when he found himself in the water, he took off his clothes and prepared to keep afloat as long as possible. He was not in the water long, when attacked by fish and at intervals of every minute, he was engaged fighting against death from the teeth of sharks and by drowning. He kept above water for five hours and by a fortunate coincidence, the Nolizement was 30 miles out of its course when the lookout sighted the nude body in the water and took the man aboard

BINFORD GIRL IS GIVEN JOB

Posing for Moving Pictures Which Will Have "Moral Lesson."

New York, Sept. 8.—Beulah Binford is at work here. After slipping quietly into New York, the girl for love of whom, the state of Virginia alleges Henry Clay Beattie, jr., killed his wife, reported at the office of a moving picture concern with which she has signed a contract. She is going to pose for moving pictures which will provide a moral lesson. Events from her own pitiable life, will be shown to guide other young girls away from the pitfalls whose wages is death. Her pictures are to "uplift."

With all her self-confidence gained by her new mode of life, Beulah showed some shyness and hesitated before the stares of those who recognized her.

"God knows I've had enough of the limelight to last me the rest of my life," she exclaimed with a toss of her head. "I'm taking this position to help myself. This is the beginning of different things for me. Here's where I turn over a new leaf."

Had Copy of "Mona Lisa."

Madrid, Sept. 8. The newspaper Espana Libre says that two foreigners have been arrested at Leon as they were carrying a basket containing a "Mona Lisa." The men protested against their detention, asserting that the picture was only a copy of Leonardo Da Vinci's stolen masterpiece, which they were taking to Coimbra, where they live.

WAS ONCE A COWPUNCHER

Congressman Carter, Who Smashed Mashers, Popular at Home.

Ardmore, Okla., Sept. 8.—Citizens of this city, the home of Representative Charles D. Carter of the Second district, are considering the matter of making some sort of public testimonial of their respect for the congressman because he "punched" a Washington store clerk who insulted Miss Italy Carter, his pretty eighteen-year-old daughter, and beat off three other clerks with his cane.

Congressman Carter's constituents are proud of him for showing such prowess in handling mashers, but they expected it of him. "Charley Carter," said one old acquaintance, "is able to hold his own as a puncher with either his fists or his cane, for he used to punch cows down around here in his youth, and that experience made him athletic. Carter has seven-sixteenths Chickasaw and Cherokee Indian in his makeup, but he's white over."

Mr. Carter is serving his third term in congress. He is a descendant of Nathan Carter, who was captured when a small boy by Shawnee Indians at the Wyoming valley massacre, Pennsylvania, and married into an Indian tribe.

Goes to Philippines.

New York, Sept. 8.—Frederick W. Taylor of Denver, who has been appointed director of agriculture for the Philippines, sailed on the French liner La Provence. He is going to his post by way of the Trans-Siberian railroad. "Agriculture in the Philippines," he said, "is in a very primitive state. There are in the islands between 7,000,000 and 8,000,000 of natives, who subsist almost entirely on rice, and the great problem that confronts us is to raise enough rice on the islands to feed them."

Effect of Nine-Hour Law.

Columbus, O., Sept. 8.—The new 9-hour law for women has increased the demand for labor. This is especially true with regard to restaurant help. In the large cities most of the restaurant proprietors are complying with the law and are putting on extra help. Not only is the demand greater for female labor, but also for male labor. This has not boosted wages, because the supply is equal to the demand.

Germany Replies to France

Berlin, Sept. 8. The French ambassador, Jules Cambon, was closeted with Herr Von Kiderlin-Waechter, the German foreign minister, and it is understood that Kiderlin-Waechter gave M. Cambon, Germany's reply to France. There is absolute official secrecy maintained, and the most trustworthy reports are extremely optimistic. According to one of these reports there is still a wide difference between German and French points of view, but the differences are in details rather than in essentials. There is extreme nervousness on the continent.

Belles and Beaux of Village May Be Haled Into Court.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 8. Justice E. B. Hartle was informed of a gruesome frolic held at Big Pool which easily discounts the recent fashionable frolic at Newport, which stirred the militant preachers of Hackensack. The Big Pool affair was a dance given in a graveyard, with the belles and beaux of the village doing round and square dances over the graves of their ancestors, ... sitting and ... ing upon the gravestones while the orchestra was seated upon mounds under which reposed the bones of the venerated dead of the community. Lanterns hung from the tops of monuments. Warrants have been issued.

MURDERER IS RECAPTURED

Returns From Hiding Place in Mountains and Is Now in Jail.

Uniontown, Pa., Sept. 8. B. Frank Smith, the double murderer who broke jail nine weeks ago, was arrested here when he ventured from the mountains for the first time to greet his wife at their home. Cleverly disguised, Smith managed to walk boldly through Uniontown until he reached his home on the outskirts.

His wife was surprised to see him, for it had been supposed that Smith had either starved or killed himself while outlawed in the mountains between this place and Cumberland. Others had seen the stranger walk into the Smith residence and soon the police had the tip and a sheriff's posse was at the house.

INFECTION IS FEARED

Soldiers Throw Comrades, Cholera Suspects From Military Train.

Constantinople, Sept. 8. Thirty-nine cases of cholera with 21 deaths have been reported here. The war office has ordered the courtmartial of the officers and doctors who were on board of a military train between Prishtina and Salonika. It is reported that a score of soldiers were thrown from the train windows and were allowed to die in agony after lying hours on the ground. Their comrades who threw them from the windows were terrified by the display of the symptoms of the disease and feared infection.

AMONG THE PERSONALS

BY H. E. TWINELLS.

TILLINGHAST inclined forward from the waist in a conventional bow and impressively raised his hat to the Frenchy little woman just entering the Astor. She looked him full in the eyes with an impudent stare and brushed past.

"I say, that's cool now," drawled young Tillinghast, turning to his companion.

"Who is she? It would hurt less to be cut by a more plain looking person," admitted the other, watching the trim little form as it disappeared through the massive entrance.

"Mademoiselle Flora Flaubert," said Tillinghast, with a flourish of his slender Piccadilly stick.

"Oh, she's the complexion person from Paris, who's been taking in society at the Plaza the past six months. Tyson has been glowing of her for a month. I hope Papa Tyson learns of it in time to keep Tommy from doing anything silly."

"Tommy better look out for Flaubert," Tillinghast smiled wearily, as he paused on the corner.

"Well, I'll feel an outcast if I meet my sister's milliner and she cuts me," laughed Tillinghast, crossing alone on Forty-second to Fifth Avenue and going leisurely to the smoking room of the Van Rensselaer Club, where he cocked his feet on the fender before the celebrated jade fireplace, helped himself to some "V. R." punch his fathers before him had drunk, and idly fingered over the morning Herald, though it was full afternoon.

He struck an item and read it several times, some of his languor leaving him. A friend dropped into a seat beside him, noted his interest, and queried: "Reading the President's message, Tillinghast?"

"Oh, hello," drawled Tillinghast, looking up and allowing the paper to slip idly through his longish fingers.

"I presume reading the fashions is more in your line?"

"No," said Tillinghast with an annoyed frown. "My tailor takes care of that. Really I can't bother my head about cravats and waistcoats; it's quite bad enough to have to carry them about."

"Newspapers are deadly dull, aren't they?" said the other, switching back. "It's really work to read the news, but one must keep up in these commercial times, you know."

"I seldom read anything but the 'Personals,'" admitted Tillinghast idly. "One finds such queer things."

"Now look at this, for instance." Tillinghast recovered the paper with an easy stoop and pointed to the following advertisement:

"WANTED—Information as to the whereabouts of Mme. Flora Flaubert, complexion specialist, formerly at the Plaza. Address Miss McArthur, 244 West 35th St., City."

"Flora Flaubert!" cried Tillinghast's companion. "Why, isn't that the woman that young Tyson has been mushing about and frothing at the mouth over, for the past month?"

"Yes, I presume so," answered Tillinghast indifferently.

"But what's she been getting into?"

"Oh, nothing, I suppose. This advertisement was probably inserted by some frantic customer who feared that Flaubert had moved away and didn't know she could be located at the Astor."

"I'm [illegible] her goings and comings, too," [illegible] said the other, raising his eyebrows.

Tillinghast [illegible] and shook his head. The other man reread the advertisement [illegible]. "Brazen! Isn't it? Now if a woman wants her features curried or renovated why can't she get one of those [illegible] beautifiers, with an adjustable [illegible] in a splendid Japanned box, or go [illegible] to Doctor Woodbury? Think of [illegible] one's name to such a deliciously frank advertisement!"

"Yes," [illegible] Tillinghast, "Flaubert wouldn't wish it [illegible] that she had a customer in the [illegible] on Thirty-fifth Street. [illegible] over [illegible] class of trade."

"You [illegible] Tillinghast," said the other thoughtfully. "[illegible] advertisements are often traps. [illegible] doing anything? [illegible] mysterious, and you [illegible] to be the god of that cheap theatrical lot."

"Oh, no. I'm just wondering about this thing," Tillinghast's lips curled curiously. "I wish there were something [illegible] I'd like to stumble on to anything unusual. Maybe that's why I read the 'Personals.'"

"It's only the evidence of a [illegible] mind," the other assured him quickly. "You'll be taking to the obituary column next."

"What would you have me do, sit before the fire here until my feet get so accustomed to the heat I'll have to wear overshoes to bed—or have chilblains for breakfast?" he dealt largely in after-thoughts.

"Tillinghast, you ought to open an office down-town and do something," said the other seriously, for he dabbled in business three months of the year.

"I'd rather open a bottle up town and do nothing," was the abrupt reply, as Tillinghast rose, dusted the ashes from his immaculate afternoon trousers and bade his friend a curt good-by.

Tillinghast was a horrible example even in the Van Rensselaer Club, where wealthy idlers were the rule. It was said that he would sit up all night rather than take his shoes off alone if his man were not there to put the trees in them. Some pitied him for having absolutely no ambition, further than that of spending his hundred thousand dollar a year income.

He stepped into his limousine at the door and sat for several minutes, wondering vaguely what to do with the afternoon.

"Oh, I ought to pick out some place-cards for the dinner to-morrow," he sighed guiltily. "No, I'll not! It's quite too tedious." Through the speaking tube he abruptly ordered his driver to take him to 244 West Thirty-fifth Street.

Sinking back comfortably on the cushions he pressed the button at his side and out slid a little gold cigarette box, the cover open. Tillinghast idly selected a cigarette and puffed it meditatively until the car came to a stop before his number.

He threw the stump away reluctantly and sauntered up the steps to the dingy, brown-stone front, as though bent on an afternoon call. A down-at-the-heels woman, with brilliant eyes and a complexion to match, which showed the ravages of time and pigment, answered his ring.

"May I see Miss McArthur?" he asked.

The woman looked at him, her face twisted into an uneasy smile.

"You ain't a reporter or anything like that?" she queried.

"No," answered Tillinghast, "I'm afraid I couldn't qualify. If you will tell Miss McArthur I believe I can give her some information concerning the lady she is advertising for, I think she will see me."

"She hasn't been seein' anybody for a week or two, sir."

"Not ill, I hope?"

"No, but she's not seein' anybody. I'll tell her you're here, though."

She disappeared and in a moment returned to direct Tillinghast to the parlor floor room.

"Nothing cheap about Miss McArthur," observed Tillinghast, as he rapped at the high panelled door. It glided open some three inches and he caught a glimpse of a bold brass bed within, and flaring curtains of red silk at the window. He could see nothing more, but easily imagined the rest. It was a typical room of a burlesque star, a second woman with musical comedy, or a hundred dollar woman in vaudeville. Something quite above the Thespian average in rooms, but somewhat below the real thing.

"You have information about Mme. Flaubert?" came a charmingly modulated voice from within.

Marvelling at its freshness and wishing for a glimpse of the occupant of the room, Tillinghast replied that he did know something of the lady in question, and asked if he might come in.

"I would prefer you didn't," there was a slight pained catch in the splendid voice. "Can't you tell me through the door?"

"A key hole conversation is seldom satisfactory," answered Tillinghast, consuming curiosity wearing through the glaze of his accustomed lassitude. "What is the great mystery? Are you a veiled lady of the Orient or a lately landed mermaid?"

"Noooo, neither," the voice answered, "but I wish— Oh! You may come in."

At that moment the door opened abruptly and Tillinghast stepped into the spacious back parlor to see [illegible]. The woman had backed toward one of the windows, her profile was lost as she looked through the pane, turning her face almost completely from him. But the poise of her head, adapted so well to the grace of her figure, made a charming picture. The flush on her cheek, heightened by the glowing reflection from the red silk curtains, and the rich curve to her lips, the refinement in every line, took Tillinghast's breath. He had expected to find a commoner type.

"I'm sure," he gasped, "you are much better without the veil—or the tail."

She snatched the curtain back with a tragic jerk and the unsoftened light from the window illuminated the other side of her face with ghastly cruelty. A red scar smeared across the well-formed cheek, the skin seemed sallow in comparison, even the nose appeared humped, and her lips surely drooped to a trembling pout on that side.

She looked a horrid hag, and Tillinghast clutched his stick nervously.

"That side's my own!" she exclaimed bitterly. "Now can you see why I'm anxious to find Mme. Flora Flaubert?"

"Did she leave you like that?" cried Tillinghast, quite unnerved by the sight of the tender Jason.

"Yes, she fixed one side all right, burned the scar on the other, and then left it the way you see it. It's the comparison that makes it so bad. Oh, I wish I'd never gone to her. My face was really all right before."

"But what did Flaubert leave you like this for?"

"Spite, I guess," she replied with a pitiful hopeless gesture. "Three days ago I went to the Plaza veiled, to get the other side fixed up to match the [illegible] side, and the bird had flown. Then I advertised."

"Did Flaubert have anything against you? Did you know her before? Have you learned anything about her?" queried Tillinghast.

"I've learned lots," she said in a low tone. "One thing in particular—" she drew closer to Tillinghast and said several quick sentences emphatically. He seemed surprised at the information and asked sharply:

"You're sure of it?"

"Certain," she replied.

"Who was your backer? Who sent you to Flaubert?" he changed his question.

"A Johnny! Young Tyson, son of the sugar trust man."

"Tyson!" cried Tillinghast. "Of course he doesn't know what you just told me?"

She flashed a keen look at him and replied, "No. Do you know him?"

"Yes. But I can't understand why Flaubert should leave you in the lurch like this. Why, it's criminal. What did he do it for?"

"Don't ask me. Maybe she was jealous."

"Were you and Tyson—did you know Tyson well?" queried the man.

"He used to come and watch me from a box every night during my last engagement with the Boston Broilers."

"And you think Flaubert was jealous of his attention?"

"I heard she was strong for him. But do you know where Flaubert is? Several people have answered my ad. and given me information, but they can't tell exactly where she is right now. That's what I want to know. She must finish the job. She said it was necessary to take the tan off, and she fixed the other side so well I trusted her. I must find her."

"I know where she is," answered Tillinghast. "How long since you've seen Tyson?"

"He came here several times during the week I was waiting for Flaubert to fix the thing up. Of course, I couldn't see him with such a face, and pretty soon he [illegible] up coming. He hasn't been here for [illegible] days now. I wouldn't let him see me. He'd refuse to pay the bill after a look at my [illegible], and I haven't money enough."

"I see," said Tillinghast abruptly. "Will you be so good as to wait here until you hear from me? You have a phone?"

She gave him her number and [illegible] into his eyes shrewdly as she put out a hand in good-by.

"You aren't Tillinghast? Who [illegible] out Mamie Monroe," she asked [illegible]ingly.

"That's my name. But I didn't [illegible] to do Mamie much good," he did [illegible] for her reply, but took one glance [illegible] anomaly of her face, and closed the [illegible] behind him.

"Drive to the Astor," he ordered the chauffeur. Then he dropped back in the tonneau and smiled: "This is interesting. Flaubert always was a [illegible] sort. McArthur's story is unique. I imagined that Flaubert was [illegible] up his lips when really. Well [illegible] her nerve right with her. What's her game is? Funny she'd leave the face like that, still, it can't be as she thinks—and looks."

At the Astor he inspected the [illegible] but found no trace of Flaubert. [illegible] to the manager and asked about her [illegible]iously. Tillinghast, having put the management under obligations to him by a series of splendid dinner parties, had trouble in learning that Flaubert had registered there under an assumed name, and that young Tyson had paid her bill when she had departed at five o'clock that afternoon.

From the baggageman it was learned that her several trunks had been checked to the Grand Central Station.

"The plot thickens," smiled Tillinghast, as he ordered his driver to take him to the Grand Central. "Hope it doesn't keep me from dinner."

With the aid of a five-dollar bill, Tillinghast learned that the trunks had been rechecked from there to a certain point, the mention of which caused him to drop his languor altogether and rush for a telephone.

He called the club and asked if Tyson had been there.

"Not since morning, sir," answered the flunkey in attendance.

"Have you heard that he is going out of town, or anything?"

"I overheard, sir, that he was going for a fortnight to one of his shooting lodges in the Catskills."

Tillinghast rang off at once and called the Tyson home on Fifth Avenue. There the news was corroborated. Young Tyson had left alone that morning for two weeks' shooting.

Tillinghast jerked out his watch.

"Seven-thirty!" he exclaimed. "Well, I've been so busy, and it's too late to do [illegible] now, but I can't overlook the dinner already ordered at Delmonico's. Tyson or no Tyson, Flaubert or no Flaubert—not to mention my two-faced friend."

Dropping back at once to his accustomed bored manner, he rode to Delmonico's and idled through the courses, tête-à-tête with a friend, after apologizing for being forced to appear at dinner in his afternoon clothes, indulging in naught but chit-chat and not once mentioning the curious trio in whose affairs he had taken such sudden interest.

Dawdling over his demi-tasse, his friend suggested that they go to the opera.

"It tempts me greatly, but it is impossible, besides, I'm not dressed for evening," said Tillinghast musingly. "La Gioconda would make my blood stir. Why is it one always puts something before his enjoyment?"

"I didn't know you ever did, Till," replied the other.

"Oh, I've such a horrible lot of duties," responded Tillinghast. "I've got to tear myself away right now, just when I am beginning to be comfortable, and go and pull a young fellow out of the Hudson."

"What do you mean?"

"Oh, nothing—only circumstances [illegible] drag me into things that don't in the least concern me." With that he rose [illegible]antly and threw away his after-dinner [illegible] as he entered the waiting auto and started for the Blue Star dock, the point to which Flaubert's trunks had been rechecked.

"It seems small to go into hiding [illegible] cheap detective," smiled Tillinghast [illegible] moment he had reached a dark corner of the deck-house, where only a few [illegible] foremen were busy with the bags at that hour. "I suppose I'm [illegible] anyway."

A moment later a tall young [illegible] wrapped in an Inverness cape [illegible] the gangplank. Tillinghast made sure that it was young Tyson.

Then Tillinghast entered a [illegible] the street and called up Miss McArthur.

"Take a taxi at once," he [illegible] drive to the Blue Star docks [illegible] Fourth Officer on the Anglia [illegible] waiting for me. Then wait!"

Tillinghast slipped back to the [illegible].

Hunting up his officer [illegible] Tillinghast said a few hurried words [illegible] a ten dollar bill into his nervous palm, and dived down into the saloon, where he sat in a dimly lighted corner and waited.

Twenty minutes later he heard the tramp of feet coming down the stairs from the upper deck and peered through the door just in time to see Tyson pause before the door to one of the most elegant suites on the ship.

Tillinghast rose quickly and waited in the doorway to the dining saloon as he saw Tyson and his small companion step into the suite.

With a curious twitching at the corners of his mouth, Tillinghast dropped his hat and stick in a corner and sauntered down to the door.

He turned the knob and flung open the door.

Inside the state-room his gaze was fixed solemnly on a tableau. Evidently he was just in time.

Mme. Flaubert was in the foreground, her handsome face tense and her hands clenched; she was glaring at him, her mouth open as though an angry flow of speech had been suddenly shocked back. Tyson cowered beside her, while his little companion stood before them, holding a book and looking from one to the other, a worried frown furrowed through his forehead. On a heavily upholstered lounge spread a large coarse Frenchwoman, as though she had been dropped there, her mouth open and her awed eyes staring.

"Hello, Tyson!" called Tillinghast in an even tone. "Getting married?"

Tyson, his flabby face gone pale, looked up with beseeching eyes and turned to Flaubert for an answer.

"Yes, he is!" the Frenchwoman cried shrilly. At the same time the door at Tillinghast's back vibrated with emphatic poundings from the surprised guard.

"Your family doesn't object, I suppose?" queried Tillinghast, in a very tired tone, as though complaining of the weather.

"It doesn't matter any who objects!" screamed Flaubert. "He's of age."

"Yes," smiled Tillinghast. "I should say you were both of age."

Flaubert caught in her breath in a sharp hiss; her passion heightened her color and made her all the more charming, as she turned to the old drab of a Frenchwoman, frozen on the lounge, and her tongue tripped lightly over a mouthful of voluble French.

"Oh, don't mind giving my pedigree to your collapsed friend," said Tillinghast; adding, "Cologne would be more serviceable in reviving her."

"I say, Tillinghast," drawled young Tyson, rallying under this show of courage, "you know, my dear fellow, a man is really his own master; and if you wouldn't mind stepping outside, we would like to complete this little personal affair."

"Surely," said Tillinghast suavely, "but you can't object to my witnessing your marriage?"

"Oh, if you put it on that ground, you are quite welcome," replied the other, pruning himself as though he had said something very clever.

"Then go ahead," commanded Flaubert, turning to the presiding shrimp, who seemed worried over the pounding at the door, which had gradually lessened.

Tillinghast watched as the man brought out again the worn little book, which he had furtively replaced in his pocket, and began reading the short marriage form in use among Justices of the Peace.

The answers came in confident monosyllables and Flaubert could not help looking up exultingly as the Justice of the Peace paused before saying, "I now pronounce you man and wife."

At that instant Tillinghast stepped forward and raised his hand. The blood seemed suddenly squeezed from Flaubert's face, her eyes went wide, and she moistened her lips as Tillinghast interrupted in a lazy drawl:

"I say, this thing has gone about far enough, you know." He looked directly at the man officiating.

"Why? What's the matter?" cried the flustered Justice in a panicky tone, looking up with his weak, fishy eyes to meet Tillinghast's direct gaze.

"Mme. Flora Flaubert is already married," said Tillinghast in as casual a tone as though he had troubled someone for a match.

"Menteur! Chien hargneux!" screamed the fair Frenchwoman, and her florid companion jumped to her feet, shook her finger before Tillinghast's nose, and hurled a torrent of vile French expletives at him.

"Your charming French does not alter the fact," smiled Tillinghast, "and I'm quite sure you are tiring your finger uselessly."

He stepped to a little white push button in the wall and held his finger on it for fully half a minute, while all eyes in the room were fixed on his.

"I say, now," blurted Tyson, "you're sure of this? How can you prove that she has been married before?"

"I'll have proof here in a minute," answered Tillinghast, as a knock came at the door.

"Is that a steward?" queried Tillinghast. Receiving a satisfactory answer, he went on: "Request the Fourth Officer to send down the lady who is waiting for Mr. Tillinghast."

Mme. Flora Flaubert, outraged, was holding an animated conversation with the frowsy Frenchwoman, and Tyson was talking to the Justice of the Peace.

In a minute there came a double knock on the door and Tillinghast opened it to admit a veiled lady, and announce, with an introductory gesture:

"Miss McArthur."

The woman threw her veil back and smiled first to Tyson and then to Flaubert. The smile was very cynical, and the resultant expressions, as her botched face came to view, showed surprise, horror and pain.

"Tell these good people what you have learned concerning Mme. Flora Flaubert," said Tillinghast, with another sweep of his expressive hand.

Miss McArthur turned and fixed her eyes coldly on the glaring orbs of Flaubert and replied firmly:

"Flaubert was convicted of theft in Rheims. She is the wife of Jacques Pierre, a French pantomime artist. She married him in Paris last year and ran away from him to America. A Frenchwoman who answered my advertisement told me the whole story."

"But, I say, where's your proof?" queried young Tyson.

"There!" answered Tillinghast, pointing dramatically to the two French women, who had caught in their breath sharply and were staring at each other, Flaubert trembling visibly and guilt plainly written on her striking face.

Tyson collapsed. The Frenchwomen huddled together, as though for protection.

"I say," gasped Tyson, reaching out a wavering hand which met Tillinghast's, "you know, it was ever so good of you. I never imagined it. You have pulled me out of a beastly hole, old man."

"Thank Miss McArthur," replied Tillinghast, stepping over to Flaubert and remarking in a low tone, which could not be heard by the others:

"Flaubert, you're a criminal. I thought something was up when you refused to recognize me at the Astor to-day. You've just missed adding bigamy to your other crimes. You ruined Miss McArthur's face in the bargain."

"It is not finished. I made a mistake. I put on oxalic acid by mistake. I can fix it in a minute," cried Flaubert, white with terror, clasping her hands and trying to appeal to him with her eyes.

"You want to leave America?" Tillinghast asked idly.

"Yes," she breathed anxiously.

"I could think of nothing better for America," he smiled. "Supposing you repair the damage to Miss McArthur's face at once. Complete your work and you can go."

She flew to a trunk and pulled out a little work box. Miss McArthur sat on the lounge and Flaubert worked over her earnestly for fifteen minutes, repairing the damage skilfully. Meanwhile Tyson paid and dismissed the Justice of the Peace and his two detectives and Tillinghast watched Flaubert's work narrowly.

"It is finished," she exclaimed suddenly, throwing down a chamois skin. "A little treatment by any specialist and it will now be all right."

Tillinghast opened the door and Tyson followed Miss McArthur out. Neither said a word to Flaubert, who had crumpled in a corner.

When they reached the dock Tillinghast queried:

"Are you seeing Miss McArthur home, Tyson?"

"I should be pleased to," answered the young fellow feelingly, for it was quite evident that he had swung back to his admiration of the actress, now that her face presented a more normal appearance.

"Not if I know it," exclaimed Miss McArthur. "I've had enough of you. You're a Johnny and you always will be a Johnny," she turned on Tyson savagely, "and it would have served you right if Flaubert had married you."

Tillinghast shook Tyson's hand in parting and put Miss McArthur in a taxi, stopping just long enough to assure her that he would be responsible for the bill to finish the work on her face.

Next night at the club, the same man he had talked with before the fireplace on the preceding day came up and smiled to Tillinghast:

"I see Flaubert sailed to-day, heaping maledictions on the heads of all Americans, calling us crude, and saying we had no chivalry and were ignorant of all sporting instinct."

"Yes, that's what they all say," replied Tillinghast in his usual weary tone, "and I guess it's more or less true."

"I suppose that poor woman whose advertisement you showed me among the 'Personals' will never see Flaubert again?"

"Probably not," replied Tillinghast, "but then, she'll doubtless find somebody else to do the work. She is probably an actress with some Johnny, like young Tyson, footing the bill for it."
